GUI CLI Reflection- SImon Conkle

      This was the first time I have used the Command-Line interface on my computer, and because I had used the GUI previously the CLI was more intimidating to play around with. However after going through the video and the practice section of the website I feel a lot more comfortable then when I started. Going through different directories, changing file names, creating and deleting files, along with the rest of those commands seem much more manageable now. I have no coding experience so working through these felt like a good place to start. I have had more experience with the GUI because of taking online classes at the university so going through that portion felt much more familiar. It was fun to begin to learn how these work and I'm excited to gain a better understanding because knowing how to use a computer efficiently seems to be becoming a more and more valuable skill to have.
